Preacher's Porch

I had a stark realization hit me recently, and that is the realization that I am getting a little older; a little slower; a little less...physical? Here's the way it happened.

As many of you know, my saw had been in the shop for a little while and I finally had gotten it back. This allowed me to catch up with some folks needing wood but it also put me over the top as far as those very large logs that have to be split or they won't fit into anyone's fireplace. Normally I rent a hydraulic splitter for the chore, but they have increased the price ($100/day) beyond what I am willing to pay. So instead, I invested in a wedge, a mall, and a sledge hammer. Then I went to work.

Now two things quickly came to my attention. The first was how sore my hands, shoulders, and everything else became. The second though was the one that got me. All afternoon I managed to hit the wedge spot-on every time I tried. After church, however, I went back to try to get some more done and I could not hit the target for anything. I would swing and either hit the log (not the wedge) or miss completely (which hurts even worse). It was very frustrating and depressing, especially when I eventually realized that the reason for my failure was my bifocals. When I finally figured out that the corrective lenses to help me see better were actually causing me to miss the mark, it really got me.

But isn't that just like everything we do in this life? No matter the amount of time, effort, energy or money that we spend, everything we do in this life is doomed to eventual failure. Things wear out and break. They quit working and fail. And that points out our need for Christ.

Revelation 21 tells us that He is making everything new. And by everything, that means ME! And then the Bible tells me that the new will never wear out, tarnish or fade. That means, once I am made new, I stay new, What a deal!

My thought for this week, instead of making resolutions that you probably won't keep anyway dealing with things that are doomed to fail, focus on your relationship with Christ. He is the one that will author new life in you. Todd
