Point 1: If _____ is for real, then _____ is also.
Point 2: Hell is described as a place of _____: _____, fire, _____, separation and more.
Point 3: Hell is also a place of _____ and of _____. It is not oblivion. It is not _____, and it is not a transient stage of passing that allows _____ exercise and movement to escape.
Point 4: Even though this is the destiny we _____, we do not have to _____ it nor to simply _____ it. We can defeat death and the grave and Hell itself because God is not willing that any should _____, but that all would come to _____. That is why He sent Jesus.

Preacher's Porch

Well, it's time for one of my favorite subjects again. While I understand that sometimes you can beat a dead horse, I just had something driven home to me yesterday. Now, to set the stage, you know that I am training for a marathon. Because of this, I went out for a relatively long run yesterday. When I was checking all of my statistics afterward, it hit me. You see, I have several devices that I use when I exercise to tell me how I am doing. They do various things from checking how far (or how long) I have been going; how high my heart rate is; how many calories I have burned, etc. Because I have several of these devices, the one I was checking shows only part of the picture. But what it shows is disturbing. It says that, since I moved to Henrietta, I have run 1465 miles during 425 workouts with a duration of 14 days, 13 hours, 14 minutes and 51 seconds. During that time, I have burned 232,898 calories equaling 66.5 pounds. Again, keep in mind that this is one of only 3 devices and that I do not always use them.

Now, here I sit still overweight and of questionable fitness wondering to what benefit this was. While I realize that I am somewhat better off than I would be had I not exercised, as soon as I stop the process for a few weeks, I may as well have never exercised to begin with.

Meanwhile, I also wonder, what if I had used that time for other things. How many people could I have knocked on their door and invited them to study the Bible? How many times could I have read through the Bible? How many prayers could I have said? How many sick could I have visited? In short, what if I had used 349 hours (almost 1/4 of a year of working 40 hours a week) for God's glory? How much better off would I be? But again, I need to understand the principle of atrophy. If I do not use it, exercise it and work it, the benefits I have received quickly diminish.

So for this week, the thought is this, exercise the spiritual. Physical exercise is of some benefit but spiritual exercise is of eternal value.

In Him,

Todd
